City of Indian Wells Ranked #4 in California for Financial Soundness

The City of Indian Wells is leading the way when it comes to fostering fiscal good health, having just garnered a fourth place ranking for financial soundness among all 482 cities in California.

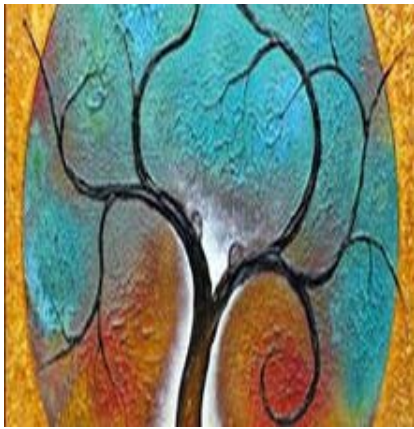

California State Senator John Moorlach of Costa Mesa released the first edition of his new report, "Senator John Moorlach Ranks California's 482 Cities for Financial Soundness." The report studies the audited finances of the state's 482 cities, examining each city's Comprehensive Annual Financial Report, and the per-capita share for a city's Unrestricted Net Position or UNP.

"We are very pleased by this outstanding ranking, because it validates and acknowledges the responsible financial leadership of our City," said Mayor Kimberly Muzik. "As noted in our most recent State of the City address, many cities are struggling with unfunded liabilities and will be challenged with this in the future, while Indian Wells has paid off its unfunded liability in order to optimize its financial good health."

The new statewide report was released on March 14, 2018 and may be viewed here.
